REVIEW OF THE IMPACT OF COVID-19 ON THE COMPANY.

For the assignment, I approach one of the MSME company in Hyderabad, which deals with capital goods equipment like air compressors and air dryers. They have clients from various sectors like Pharma, cement industries, engineering industries, food and beverages and general engineering, hospitals, to name a few.

From my interaction with them, I gathered information on how the Covid-19 Pandemic has impacted them.

During the first wave, like every other company, this company had to adapt to the situation and adopt tech by resorting to video conferences with customers, which was previously not a regular practice. Also, the lockdown for an extended period has a hit on the company's business.

In the second wave of the pandemic, India has been facing a severe shortage of oxygen. To combat this, the government of India has planned to set up several oxygen generation plants in government hospitals across India to become self-reliant. This led to a sudden spike in demand for compressors and dryers in the past few months. Compressors and Dryers are an integral part of an oxygen generator, which has provided the company under consideration and many similar such companies with a great opportunity. It has become a challenge to cater to the sudden rise in demand due to the demand-supply imbalance.

To Whom So Ever It May Concern

I wish to inform that Ms. Vaishnavi Mocherla of ICFAI Tech of enrolment number 19STUCHH010328 from CSE department has contacted me over the phone on 8th May 2021 to discuss about the impact of Covid on the pharmaceutical industry this pre and post-pandemic. During the conversation, I could sense that Vaishnavi had done pre work on the topic, as evident by the fact that she raised important questions that had an impact on the industry. We were able to come up with some solutions throughout the discussion. I was impressed by her zeal and enthusiasm during the conversation. I wish her all the success..

This is to certify that Ms. Pradakshina Tripathi has been in touch with undersigned office for a telephonic survey on Pre & Post COVID-19 impacts on the Businesses and different Industry segments.

This survey was aimed to understand the current scenario in various business sectors while comparing it with pre pandemic situations. As part of the survey, she designed various questions, which was also discussed for understanding the ground situation much closely.

During the survey discussion, she demonstrated good analytical skills with a self-motivated attitude to learn new things. Her approach was very professional and was able to complete the survey successfully on time.

We wish her all the best for her future endeavours.

IMPACT OF COVID-19 ON IT SECTOR

SRAVANTHI KARINGULA

ICFAI-TECH, HYDERABAD

Information technology is designated as an essential service and in this pandemic time there is no drastic change in the work and projects but employees getting into digital working became a task for the HR's and managers. This global pandemic disrupts business continuity for all kinds of enterprises but digital working became the new normal and the pandemic has pushed companies under IT sector to adopt digital in a full- fledged manner with urgency, this is a time that will be recorded in history as a turning point in human civilization.

Three tectonic shifts witnessed in this pandemic time are first one is acceleration of digital systems everywhere. Second shift is the outcome of using digital systems is the new business models and opportunities that are emerging to address the needs of this digital age and this made everyone to built on a foundation of trust powered with technologies like cloud, AI, edge, etc. Third shift is the emergence of the network economy this pandemic has actually taught us new ways of how we conduct our business, how we work, interact and connect larger community. In this pandemic Cloud enables companies to become a lot more agile and a lot more cost effective.

In pandemic time it sector was facing large scale job-losses at that we need to think about how do we drive innovation and develop offerings, develop solutions that can help the people who lost job in this pandemic time.

This mail is from MNBT Constructions Managing Director Mr B.Venkatappa Reddy. It is regarding a student B.Bindu Madhavi Reddy from ICFAI University who contacted me regarding her report on the subject of Principles of Management. She was obedient and skilful. As a part of her report, she wants to take an in-depth report of the process before and after the pandemic in our construction site. She asked me questions regarding all the process of the works before the pandemic and how the pandemic has affected our construction sector and what are all the difficulties we faced during the pandemic. We both discussed all the issues faced and measures which can be taken to avoid future loss. This meeting of us was interactive and meeting a student like her and discussing all these issues was good. This report is a great initiative by the faculty of the college.
Thank you.

Respected sir,

I, Ch Siri Lahari (enrolment no ——19STUCHH010197) visited Potluri associates on 10-05-2021 as a part of the field visit and reviewed the process before and after the pandemic. there had been a lot of changes made due to the pandemic. Hiring workers had been a real hassle and there had been a slight decrease in the clientele due to the pandemic. construction companies are used to cyclical downturns, but the speed and strength with which COVID-19 has struck is unprecedented. Projects are being delayed or cancelled. Supply chains are under threat. Employee and subcontractor labour health is a concern, and there are practical challenges around social distancing on construction sites.

Impact of covid-19 on Industry: Pre and Post Pandemic

(KUSETTY PAVAN KALYAN)

ABSTRACT

Covid-19, also called as Corona virus started to spread across the globe from the year 2019 and is still in progress. Lockdown initiative is taken by government to protect lives of the people during this period. In this interval of time, a lot of sectors are affected resulting in property loss, financial loss, shares going down in different companies, etc. Different areas like service sector, Business, International Trade, Banking sector, Supply Chain Management, Marketing, MSME, Tourism sector, Stock Market which are impacted by Covid-19 is also observed. Various initiatives taken by government towards the revival of the economy is also observed. Many changes are observed comparing with pre and post pandemic situations in various places. In this research a detailed analysis in each sector and the changes, affects, etc are displayed. We can also find different pictorial analysis which is the most effective way in which we can understand about the damage done to various sectors. Interesting thing about this research is, this is the most updated analysis collected, in which famous places are involved, and various decisions taken by the government, can be clearly understood.

1. INTRODUCTION

Coronavirus or COVID-19 as it is officially known, has brought everyday life of human beings to a standstill. Ever since the first case of COVID-19 was reported to today when almost every country in the world is affected, it is just almost 6 months from the 1st case officially reported. Originally reported first in Wuhan, China, the COVID-19 virus traveled throughout the world and infected millions. COVID-19 is unstoppable unless a vaccine is developed.

Although people have recovered from COVID-19 without a vaccine, that process is turning a nightmare since out of those who were recovered, people in many countries including South Korea have shown the symptoms of COVID-19 again as if the virus has reverted. This new scenario of COVID-19 has further left people vulnerable to the infection as they are not secure even after being recovered from COVID-19.

As many as 162 countries are going into lockdown, and businesses across the globe are either closed or operating in fear. The situation has further worsened ever since the WHO coronavirus expert has said that "There may never be a COVID-19 vaccine". (1) The current situation along with slow economic growth in the previous year in India is leading to extreme tensed market conditions. There were rising fiscal deficits, unemployment, and interest rates. Along with this, the Novel Coronavirus has sent tremors down Indian trade markets.

2. IMPACT OF COVID-19 ON VARIOUS SECTORS

2.1 TOURISM SECTOR

The crisis is an opportunity to rethink how tourism interacts with our societies, other economic sectors and our natural resources and ecosystems; to measure and manage it better; to ensure a fair distribution of its benefits and to advance the transition towards a carbon neutral and resilient tourism economy.

- Tourism is one of the world's major economic sectors. It is the third-largest export category (after fuels and chemicals) and in 2019 accounted for 7% of global trade.
- For some countries, it can represent over 20% of their GDP and, overall, it is the third largest export sector of the global economy.
- Tourism is one of the sectors most affected by the Covid-19 pandemic, impacting economies, livelihoods, public services and opportunities on all continents. All parts of its vast value-chain have been affected.
- Export revenues from tourism are fallen by $910 billion to $1.2 trillion in 2020. A huge impact is resulted and reduced global GDP by 1.5% to 2.8%.
- Tourism supports one in 10 jobs and provides livelihoods for many millions more in both developing and developed economies.
- In some Small Island Developing States (SIDS), tourism has accounted for as much as 80% of exports, while it also represents important shares of national economies in both developed and developing countries.
- As many as 100 million direct tourism jobs are at risk, in addition to sectors associated with tourism such as labour-intensive accommodation and food services industries that provide employment for 144 million workers worldwide. Small businesses (which shoulder 80% of global tourism) are particularly vulnerable.
- Women, who make up 54% of the tourism workforce, youth and workers in the informal economy are among the most at-risk categories.
- 90% of countries have closed World Heritage Sites, with immense socio-economic consequences for communities reliant on tourism. Further, 90% of museums closed and 13% may never reopen.

ICFAI FOUNDATION FOR HIGHER EDUCATION Hyderabad

(Deemed-to-be-University Under Section 3 of the UGC ACT, 1956)

- The sudden fall in tourism cuts off funding for biodiversity conservation. Some 7% of world tourism relates to wildlife, a segment growing by 3% annually.
- The impact on biodiversity and ecosystems is particularly critical in SIDS and LDCs. In many African destinations, wildlife accounts for up to 80% of visits, and in many SIDS, tourism revenues enable marine conservation efforts.
- Several examples of community involvement in nature tourism show how communities, including indigenous peoples, have been able to protect their cultural and natural heritage while creating wealth and improve their wellbeing. The impact of COVID-19 on tourism places further pressure on heritage conservation as well as on the cultural and social fabric of communities, particularly for indigenous people and ethnic groups.

- Some places before and after covid-19 brought a great damage and a huge financial loss.
- A few places before and after covid-19 :

2.2 BANKING SECTOR

Banks certainly have their hands full in light of the novel coronavirus outbreak (COVID-19). Borrowers and businesses face job losses, slowed sales, and declining profits as the virus continues to spread around the world. Banking customers are likely to start seeking financial relief, and federal bank regulators in the U.S. are encouraging banks to help them.

In addition to managing the direct economic impact of the coronavirus, banks need to have a plan in place to protect employees and customers from its spread. Many banks are already starting to encourage remote working of some employees.

Customers, who are increasingly wary of spending time in crowded public spaces, will need to have a way to conduct banking without physical interaction. By implementing completely digitized and remote customer transactions, banks can ensure that both everyday and exceptional processes will be carried out with limited disruption.

As community spread of the coronavirus (COVID-19) proliferates, alternatives to in-person banking and physical exchanges are looking more and more attractive.

For example, the World Health Organization (WHO) has advised people to use contactless payment and avoid handling banknotes as much as possible. That's because the coronavirus may continue to live on banknotes for days, accelerating spread of the disease.

The Bank of Korea has started to quarantine bills originating from local banks, keeping them isolated for up to two weeks. Likewise, the Chinese government requested lenders to disinfect physical notes and place them in quarantine. The U.S. Federal Reserve has instituted a practice to isolate banknotes from Asia for seven to ten days.

Of course, it's not just paper money that's increasingly being viewed and treated as a potential coronavirus carrier. Banks, consumers, and governments are weighing the risks of in-person banking, and opting for digital channels when they have the choice.

Moreover, some people may be capable of spreading the disease even before they show symptoms of illness, making avoidance of disease nearly impossible. Elderly consumers and consumers with preexisting conditions will likely be the first to avoid physical branches, as the coronavirus poses a direct threat to their life. Consumers under quarantine will literally have no choice but to forgo the branch visit.

Current official recommendations from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention advise individuals to stay six feet away from visibly sick people. This may be all but impossible at physical branches, where long lines and close interactions with bankers are expected. All it takes is one infected person to sneeze or cough to put everyone else around them at risk.

2.2.1 Shifting towards digital Banking

- Government agencies and banks are anticipating this shift towards digital banking, and taking relevant measures. Last week, the Federal Financial Institutions Examination Council ordered U.S. banks to test their online systems' capacity to handle an influx of digital banking demands. The agency called for "increased reliance on online banking, telephone banking, and call center services" in addition to remote working.
- Goldman Sachs traders are reported to have done just that, as traders are testing out working from home. HSBC has implemented split-site working arrangements in their Asia offices after an employee came down with the virus.
- Singapore's DBS bank may provide a template for what branchless banking could look like in our coronavirus reality. When the bank was forced to evacuate its staff after an employee was diagnosed with the virus, DBS hunkered down to provide customers with a robust digital banking system.
- It has digitized 11 financing processes to reduce the need for in-person exchanges, and is offering business accounts instant interbank fund transfers. The bank is also running webinars to train its staff on how to use digital tools.
- In addition, SMEs can apply online for a short-term loan of up to S$50,000 to soften the blow of reduced sales and cash flow.
- The rise of digital giants such as Amazon and Netflix has primed consumers to expect satisfying and complete online interactions in all areas of their life, including banking. The coronavirus has just served to intensify people's desire for digital services, turning it into a matter of urgency.

2.3 STOCK MARKET

Since its start from the Chinese city of Wuhan in early 2020, the COVID-19 is causing huge impact on the financial markets around the world. Dramatic reactions to the pandemic were observed during the virus outbreak.

Financial reports show spectacular losses recorded by major stock market indices in the world due to the COVID-19 pandemic sweeping across the globe. Statistics show that MSCI World index, which includes stocks from 23 developed countries and 24 emerging markets lost 10.7 percent of its value between January 23 to March 6, 2020. In the same period, STOXX Europe 600 index, which includes stocks of 600 companies from 17 European countries, fell by more than 12 percent. Approximately the same drop was recorded by the CSI 300 Index, which includes the 300 largest stocks in the Chinese Class-A share market, in the same period.

In the United States, recent volatility levels rival or surpass those last seen in October 1987 and December 2008 and, before that, in late 1929 and the early 1930s (Baker et al., 2020). On March 18, the S & P500 index was off 27% for the year to date, Germany's DAX was down 38%, and Japan's Nikkei was off 29%[4]. By the end of February 2020, GCC stock markets have seen their biggest monthly decline in four years due to rising coronavirus cases in the region. The MSCI GCC index declined by 7.3% during the month, the biggest decline since January 2016. Qatar's QE index (-9.1%) witnessed the biggest decline during the month, followed by Saudi Arabia's Tadawúl (-7.5%) and UAE's Dubai Financial Market (DFM) index (-4.9%) (GCC Markets Monthly Report, February 2020). GCC stock market situation worsened further in March due to the increase in COVID-19 cases coupled with the 25% decline in oil prices, the biggest single day drop since the 1991 Gulf war. The MSCI GCC Index declined by 8.9% and the agammaegate GCC market-capitalization declined by US$162 Billion on March 9, 2020 (GCC Equity Market Outlook, March 2020).

Zhang et al. (2020) employ simple statistical analysis to explore the relationship between stock market risks and the COVID-19 outbreak in global financial markets. They used stock market data of the top 10 infected countries by number of confirmed cases (together with Japan, South Korea and Singapore) up to March 27, 2020. They found that the pandemic has led to great risk and uncertainty in global financial market. The risk levels of all the countries has increased substantially between February and March 2020. and uncertainty in global financial market. The risk levels of all the countries has increased substantially between February and March 2020. Cepoi (2020) investigates the impact exerted by COVID19-related news on stock market return in the top six most affected countries by the pandemic, which are the USA, the UK, Germany, France, Spain and Italy. He employs a panel quantile regression on a balanced panel over the period from February 3, 2020 to April 17, 2020. Results show that fake news influence negatively the lower and the middle quantiles throughout the distribution of returns. Other findings show that the media coverage leads to a decrease in returns across middle and upper quantiles. Moreover, the financial contagion across companies is detrimental to returns from 50th to 75th quantiles.

2.4 MARKETING

The appearance of coronavirus recently represents the most difficult pandemic that caused big impact on various economic sectors worldwide. Governments have been enforcing different approaches to minimize the effect of COVID 19 on the public health through lockdown procedures, restrictions on the movement of individuals, and practicing social distancing. These actions have affected most of the businesses as the purchase behaviours of consumers changed drastically which caused significant implication on profitability and the effectiveness of marketing practices. COVID-19 has affected marketing strategies and actions of different organizations, such as corporate social responsibility (CSR), consumption pattern, advertising, marketing communication program, and supply chain.

CSR is one of the main pillar for shaping brand image and determining business success. The pandemic of Covid-19 provided organizations with great opportunities for active engagement with their strategies concerning CSR and programs. For instance, cause related marketing campaigns have become an increasingly prevalent means for firms to link their offerings with noteworthy social impact initiatives to provide care and support for the victims of COVID-19 pandemic (DiResta, Williford, Da'Morus, & Genn, 2020). The brands and all of their charities should be in line with country laws and legal requirements. As firms adapt and anticipate the means for promoting their products and services during the crises of COVID-19, governmental institutions are watching closely likely unfair or unethical business practices in order to safeguard the consumers, terminate the scams of COVID-19, and monitor aggressive marketing. Firms must understand and follow the government regulations and aims at serving customers in the best way to ensure their well-being and safety.

Another important area which was influenced by the pandemic of COVID 19 is the consumption of wellness and healthy items (He & Harris, 2020). There has been an increase in buying and consuming nutrition and medical goods, for instance fever reducers, vitamin supplements, pain killer, which are directly associated with the coronavirus. Consumers also started reducing their visits to restaurants and because of the fear from the infection of COVID 19. This has made a challenge for marketers to attract and serve customers. For policy makers, the post-crisis period will be an ideal opportunity for health organizations and other governmental agencies to creatively promote healthy consumption and product choice (He & Harris, 2020). Overall, it is obvious that the pandemic of Covid-19 has significantly affected the ethical decision making of consumers during the pandemic. Assumed that the pandemic may likely last for a long period of time on a global scale, its consequences are likely to be long lasting after the pandemic; but it is going to end at a time.

REGISTRAR
THE ICFAI FOUNDATION FOR HIGHER EDUCATION

Moreover, COVID 19 created a disruption in the supply chains and increased the shortage of consumer goods as the majority of the firms in different parts of the world depend on Chinese products and manufacturing skills (Ansari & Ganjoo, 2020). Due to COVID pandemics and government restrictions, the imports and exports have caused delays in shipping time for firms. For this reason, the prices for many products have increased and customers were unable to find some items easily as before the crises. Due to this, companies leveraged their resources from internal sources and reduce the outsourcing of various resources to support the local economy and industries.

Additionally, the restrictions of social distancing from governments on customers' movement has created obstacles for many firms in reaching their customers (Omar, Ishak, & Jusoh, 2020). Therefore, the main medium for connecting both companies and consumers is via online and digital marketing. As most of the customers spend long time on mobile screen or online, this represented the fundamental way for communicating with them. The digital marketing techniques involve search engine optimization, email marketing, content marketing, social media marketing, social pay per click, and display marketing. An increasing demand for digital marketers and SEO analyst is also expected to occur in the near future. Consequently, live streaming and e-commerce are becoming gradually common during the pandemic of COVID-19 for online retailing and various businesses (Hamilton, 2020). The shift from traditional media to online marketing has also been noticed during COVID 19 pandemic.

The worldwide pandemic of COVID-19 has also resulted in significant changes in advertising, marketing strategies, spending on media and promotions; thus forcing firms to reconsider their philosophies about advertising program and the campaigns of marketing to retain a stable stream of revenue (DiResta et al., 2020). Although brands at this time search for striking the appropriate tone during a worldwide health emergency, the future signifies market alteration, enlarged competition and a demand for innovative and aggressive marketing practices. For instance, slow consumer demand represents the critical challenges during the crises of COVID-19. Hence, based on the prominent changes in the behaviours and psychology of consumers during the isolation at home, several retailers, restaurants, and companies of different types decided to use e-commerce and improve customer services through home delivery (Wang, Hong, Li, & Gao, 2020).

2.5 BUSINESS

Businesses must navigate the financial and operational challenges of coronavirus while rapidly addressing the needs of their people, customers and suppliers.

Today's CEOs are faced with overwhelming, competing challenges and uncharted waters as they continue to navigate the impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic. Many organizations are already taking "no regret" actions to emerge from the pandemic stronger. These leaders are facing the crisis with a spirit of reinvention—accelerating digital transformation, establishing variable cost structures, and implementing agile operations.

But in recent weeks, the landscape has changed, with the pandemic continuing to peak in some markets and returning in others. Amidst this uncertainty, the steps for reopening and reinvention remain unchanged, but companies must now consider how the pandemic's progress, strength or recurrence in different geographies is impacting their recovery strategies.

Companies must outmaneuver uncertainty by course correcting, again and again as circumstances change. This requires them to reassess assumptions, re-evaluate scenarios and strengthen their ability to sense and respond.

The coronavirus outbreak has forced companies to reevaluate how contact centers are leveraged, how employees deliver relevant customer experiences, where they work, and how digital channels can be used to support business continuity through the crisis and beyond.

The global COVID-19 pandemic has forever changed our experiences—as customers, employees, citizens, humans— and our attitudes and behaviors are changing as a result. The crisis is fundamentally changing how and what consumers buy and is accelerating immense structural changes in the consumer goods industry, for example. Once the immediate threat of the virus has passed, companies will need to consider the impact of these changes on the way we design, communicate, build and run the experiences that people need and want.

With these emerging new behaviors, organizations have an opportunity to accelerate the pivot to digital commerce, by expanding existing offerings and creating new lines of service, like the retailers rallying to provide "contactless" delivery and curb-side pick-up services for consumers. This acceleration will force organizations to reimagine their digital strategies to capture new marketplace opportunities and digital customer segments.

Organizations globally are experiencing unprecedented workforce disruption. Virtually all companies are still determining how we will work in the short- and long-term, as workforces and communities try to function and perform, while struggling to cope with what is happening in their daily lives.

CHROs across industries are rising to the challenge, helping people and organizations navigate massive workforce shifts, such as the urgent need to shift to a remote workforce to protect and empower employees, serve customers and to establish business continuity. For example, the now critical need for virtual care messaging and visits in healthcare.

CHROs' expertise in developing agile workforce strategies is critical to keeping the global economy viable and helping people and their families survive financially now and in the future. Opportunities are emerging as companies and industries work together to keep people working. For example, Accenture has partnered with CHROs of leading companies to create People + Work Connect, an analytics-based platform that facilitates continued employment.

2.6 MSME SECTOR

MSME sector in India is second largest employment generator after agriculture, and acts as a breeding ground for entrepreneurs and innovators with considerable support in strengthening business ecosystem. The estimated number of MSMEs in India is 63 million and employs 110 million individuals. Indian MSMEs produce more than 6,000 products for local and global consumption. According to DGCIS data, the value of MSME related products in India is $147,390.08 million and contributed 48.56% of total export during 2017-18. MSMEs exposed to higher level of integration with global value and supply chains are playing critical role in global trade systems. Data from 2019 shows that sector contributed 29% to overall GDP.

Various reports, researches and surveys have proved again and again that this sector act as a catalyst for socio-economic development of the country. All this becomes more important with government's new mission of achieving $5 trillion economy target by 2025. Within this target the role of MSME sector is going play an important role, with expected contribution to GDP above 50% mark. The potential of Indian MSME sector is still untapped and that is one of the reasons why government policies are now more convergent towards building resilient ecosystem with better breadth and depth.

The announcement of country wide lockdown dragged MSME owners, employers and external stakeholders in unexpected times, where no one had experience to handle this kind of situation. Extended lockdown had negative impact on supply of finished goods, procurement of raw material and availability of employees to work in production and supply processes. During April to June 2020, sector faced challenges related to debt repayments, wages/salaries, statutory dues, etc.

Survey reports have shown that disruptions caused by the Covid-19 pandemic have impacted MSMEs earnings by 20-50%, micro and small enterprises faced the maximum heat, mainly due to liquidity crunch. Enterprises working in essential commodity business were better off in terms of interrupted but predictable cash flows. Some enterprises innovated their ways by shifting focus from non-essential commodities towards essential commodities; like production of hand sanitizer and toiletries, PPE kits, reusable masks, etc. and are able to survive in tough times. MSMEs present in remote areas also faced lots of difficulties due to interrupted supply chain systems and intrastate lockdown provisions.

It is not only the enterprise which faced challenges; even consumers are left with lower disposable income. Many enterprises laid-off their workers because of inability to pay salaries, vacated their offices due to incurring expenses and halted their production due to stopped demand. Ambiguity in future trade and bounce back of new normal is keeping financial institutions at bay for extending any new financial lending or cover potential risk. This all-round uncertainty needed a push by government, to boost market confidence and bring back regular cash flow in economy.

Economic slowdown along with border tensions, had again dragged us to focus back on self-sustainable values, the Swadeshi dream. The Atmanirbhar Bharat Mission was launched to face two burning issues simultaneously; one being boost to MSMEs and other being less dependent upon foreign nations.

2.7 SUPPLY CHAIN MANAGEMENT

The global Coronavirus pandemic has challenged the modern global supply chain like never before. Supply chain resilience has conventionally focused on protecting largely against single point failures – for instance, identifying a key component and dual sourcing to ensure continuous supply.

But COVID-19 has had a truly global impact, where many supply chains have faced multiple fractures – at component suppliers, at manufacturing sites and in the 'last mile' to the customer. It is difficult, if not impossible, for firms to have redundancy across all those operations and still maintain efficient supply chains.

Which makes it ironic that we are relying on a particular global supply chain to get us out of the crisis – namely, that of the COVID -19 vaccines.

Fig-6 Vaccination supply chain

In terms of time from the beginning of work on the vaccines to jabs being made available to the public, they have operated faster than ever before. But it is natural to expect that the actual journey from development to manufacturing to patient would encounter some obstacles.

The first is product development. All of the vaccines so far approved for use, and most of those under development, require multiple doses to be fully effective. Others require ultra-cold supply chains. These product design aspects have had huge implications downstream, as health agencies and governments work out the best way to distribute, administer and schedule follow-up doses.

Issues of manufacturing and distribution are perhaps the most obvious disruption to supply chains – but even here, many have been caught off-guard. A few months ago, the emphasis was on vaccine approvals, and few were talking about component supplies such as shortages of glass vials to hold the doses. The conversation has moved quickly onto vaccine production rates, and how factory investments in capacity expansion required short-term postponement of deliveries.

As manufacturers allocate volumes to their various production sites, the question on international distribution has become controversial – about whether, with vaccine stock moving across borders despite local demand not being met, national distribution will be prioritised on price, contract timing or need.

2.8 INTERNATIONAL TRADE

COVID-19 damages decrease trade by increasing trade costs between countries. For instance, COVID-19 cases/deaths reduce on-site presence of workers, such as truck drivers and port workers, in the transport and shipping sectors. Lockdown policies and port restrictions reduce air flights and marine transportation between countries. For instance, Heiland and Ulltveit-Moe (2020) have reported that the decrease in container ships' departure was 29% compared to 2019 in the first week of April 2020.These disruptions in transport sectors delay transportation and increase freight charges. Besides that, the spread of infectious diseases in a country affects both the demand side and the supply side of the economy. Hereafter, we summarize the possible effects of the COVID-19 damages in exporting and importing countries separately.

The spread of COVID-19 led to social distancing and lockdown measures. These measures decrease people's mobility with regards to workplaces. School closures force some workers to be away from their work to look after their children. Death and prolonged illness directly reduce the workforce. These changes reduce the supply of goods and make them less elastic in price, shifting the country's supply curve upward and making it steeper. The COVID-19 damage and the subsequent lockdown orders also disrupt transportation sectors in exporting countries, increasing the cost of exporting by raising the port and terminal handling costs.

In sum, it is natural that the COVID-19 damage in an exporting country decreases the scale of production, thereby reducing the export supply in that country. There will be industrial heterogeneity in terms of the degree of supply shocks. For instance, the supply shocks will be smaller in industries providing essential products, such as food and medical products, than non-essential products, such as automobiles and machines. This is because countries are trying to maintain the supply of essential products, and lockdown orders such as factory closure are usually not applied to the manufacturers of these products.

2.10 SERVICE SECTOR

A strong and better economic recovery from the COVID-19 pandemic requires governments to make the services sector a key element in their policy mix.

Services play a key role in increasing productivity, efficiency and effectiveness in the whole economy.

Globally, services represent two-thirds of economic output, more than half of the world's jobs and about a quarter of direct exports.

But direct exports of services are just the tip of the iceberg. Services provide significant inputs to all economic sectors.

With their indirect contributions, including those produced in-house by non-services firms, services can account for almost two-thirds of the value-added of total exports.

Further, services make up two-thirds of total productivity growth in developing countries, making them a key element of these countries' strategies for industrialization.

At the eighth session of UNCTAD's multi-year expert meeting on trade, services and development, held in September, experts and policymakers underlined that services can help countries recover better from the COVID-19 crisis, and keep them on track towards the UN Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs).

As countries reel under the pandemic's economic impact, the services sector can help turn the tide by creating opportunities for greater income, food security, productivity, employment, investment and trade.

Servicification – putting a premium on the role of trade in services to power national economies – needs to be a key element of countries' strategies for recovery from COVID-19.

But for services to serve societies and economies, countries need inclusive, coherent and fitting policies. In particular, developing countries and least developed countries need support to strengthen and upgrade their services.

With developing countries relying more on traditional services and developed countries depending on knowledge-intensive ones, the landscape is not even.

Dealing with the pandemic has underscored the need to mind the structural gap between developed and developing countries. It's critical to promote key services inputs that transform the economy and trade in developing countries.

This calls for international cooperation, including South-South, on trade in services as a key element of the policy agenda.

Services can be used strategically to facilitate economic transformation. These include ICT services that enable telework, digital financial services and e-commerce platforms, which have kept economies running amid COVID-19-induced lockdowns.

ICT services, which can increase efficiency and reduce costs, promote the digital transformation of farming, manufacturing and other sectors.

This services-enabled digitization improves supply and export capacity, enhancing countries' economic resilience and recovery in the wake of the pandemic.

Digitization of services has helped creative industries cope with the pandemic, as many creatives have turned to digital platforms and technologies to connect with audiences and consumers.

The potential of digitization is equally important in other services that have been severely affected by the pandemic, such as tourism, the world's third largest export sector (after fuels and chemicals).

3. GOVERNMENT INITIATIVES TOWARDS THE REVIVAL OF THE ECONOMY

The world is currently fighting COVID-19, which has nearly 8,00,000 confirmed cases and caused over 42,000 deaths globally. What started in China has caused a global upsurge, with India alone registering over 1390 cases of which 35 have succumbed to the virus. In the wake of the rising death toll and under the directions of the World Health Organization (WHO) that declared the novel virus as a pandemic, the Indian Government took stringent actions to detect, treat and reduce the transmission of the virus.

3.1 PREACUTIONS TO FIGHT AGAINST COVID-19

While the virus scored globally, the government took proactive measures to control its spread in India. It conducted heavy screenings and mandatorily quarantined incoming International travellers and also conclusively suspended all visas, except for diplomats and employment, till April 15. All cross-national borders were sealed, and railway operations were suspended.

Further, all schools, gyms, malls, clubs, hotels, community halls, etc. were shut. But due to the increased risk of the spread of the virus, on March 24, the Prime Minister announced a complete 21-day lockdown for the entire nation, banning people to move out of their houses. This act, thus, severely restricted the community spread of the virus. However, the downside is that the lockdown is expected to shave off more than Rs. 10 lakh crores from the Indian economy.

3.2 MEDICAL MEASURES

The government has designated 72 centres across the country for the diagnosis and treatment of COVID-19. As per the WHO estimate, there should be 3 beds/1,000 people while India has only 0.7 beds/1,000 people. Thus, to provide for more isolation wards, the government converted 20,000+ railway coaches into isolation stations. Meanwhile, the centre has also ramped up steps to develop a vaccine for the pandemic.

4. SUMMARY

Using PSVAR on data from 1995 to 2019 and system dynamic modeling (real-time data parameters connected to COVID-19), we estimated the potential impact of the current pandemic crisis on the tourism industry worldwide. Empirical studies on pandemic outbreaks and their impact on the tourism industry are not found in the literature. The COVID-19 pandemic outbreak will have an unmatched negative impact (vast decline in inbound tourism arrivals) on the travel tourism industry worldwide, and we empirically investigated those impacts in this study. Negative shocks will be significant, not just in the short run but also in the long run, and it will take several years for the industry to recover. The summary of our empirical results on a world level, demonstrated in the various scenarios, shows that the travel and tourism industry's contribution to the GDP will decline from − 4.1 US$ trillion to − 12.8 US $ trillion. In addition, the total tourism industry contribution to employment will fall from − 164.506 million to − 514.080 million jobs, and lost inbound tourist spending will plunge from − 604.8 US$ bn to − 1.9 US$ trillion with a fall in capital investments of − 362.9 US$ bn to − 1.1 US$ trillion.

Krueger et al. (2020) shows that the rational relocation of economic activities across sectors is a strong mitigation force, even though the government is not explicitly intervening. According to the findings of the Swedish Model Solution, agents need to adjust their sectoral actions independently to ensure that the economic and human costs of the COVID-19 crisis are substantially modulated without government interference.

Policy must be resilient in the face of change and/or adaptive to various eventualities. In order to avoid this relatively short-term occurrence from having a long-term "scarring" impact, a major priority should be an economic policy response that supports the companies concerned. In addition, helping people who lose their income is important as well continuing to provide the needed public services. Eventually, policy makers will examine whether broader measures will be necessary to help emMARployees who are losing their jobs or facing pay cuts (Emerson and Johnson, 2020; McKee and Stuckler, 2020). The environmental hazards impact on tourism (Halkos and Zisiadou, 2020) shows expected heavy economic losses for the most developed countries and significant deaths for the least developed countries.

5. CONCLUSION

The entire world is in the grip of vicious coronavirus. The pandemic outbreak has sparked a global health emergency along with social and economic crisis unleashing unprecedented collapse of the economic activities and business operations. It has severe repercussions on the global business world. Therefore, this study has put forward the potential effects of coronavirus on the different sectors of Indian economy and the reasons for which India one of the emerging economies in the world can be benefitted in this crisis period. Moreover, the study highlights the survival strategies that are essential for a business to cope with the present situation. However, during this current pandemic scenario, every enterprise should brace for the uncertainties and challenges that are cropping up due to coronavirus. They need to be proactive and should build up strategies to combat the effect of coronavirus in order to sustain during this tough time. They need to apprehend probable impending changes in business environment and should identify the opportunities in order to strive and thrive.

Finally, government initiatives are important and every one needs to follow them like maintaining social distance, wearing masks, frequently using hand sanitizers, etc. The impact of covid-19 is huge as we have seen how the sectors have changed during the pandemic. We sure going to wipe out this pandemic, following all the rules and regulations laid by the government.
